A VERY PERSONAL PROBLEM

I hate calling shops.

Just to ask if they have something.

IT STARTED WITH A PHONE

I knew what I wanted. I couldn't find it online.

Online availability Out of stock.

So I tried nearby shops.

Surely someone nearby had it?

MY NEXT MOVE

Find a shop. Make a call. Repeat.

01 Open Google Maps.

02 Find electronics shops.

03 Call and ask about stock.

Then came the replies.

WHAT I GOT BACK

One enquiry.
Four dead ends.

- No one picked up.
- “Available, but a different colour.”
- “Available, but no offers.”
- “Come to the shop and see.
  I can’t tell you on the phone.”

I still had more calls to make.

WHAT I ACTUALLY WANTED

Make the first calls for me.

Check stock, colour and offers.

Tell me which shops are worth following up with.

Then I can call the select few.

ENTER BOOMERANG

The enquiries, handled on my behalf.

An AI voice agent that calls shops and brings their answers back.

01 You say what you need.

02 Boomerang calls your chosen shops.

03 You get shop-by-shop answers.

Anything they don’t confirm stays unconfirmed.

You choose who to follow up with.

SO I BUILT IT

I built Boomerang for this.

What do you hate calling shops about?

askboomerang.vercel.app